My Grandfather Carlo arrived in the port of New York as a young Italian immigrant from Reggio Calabria, Italy in the 1930's. Settling into the Pacific Northwest Italian community in Seattle, he lived out his American dream. Making wine was one of his life's greatest passions, and he was very proud of the fine taste and quality of his wine.

In 2007, Don Carlo Vineyard was planted in the Walla Walla valley reminiscent of his passion to make great wine. With the talent of Tim Kennedy, founder of Tim's Cascade Style Potato Chips, a Pacific Northwest favorite, we have planted the vines, harvested and crushed the fruit, and bottled this wine in the hope that you enjoy it with your family and friends as much as we do. So, as Carlo would always say as he raised a glass of wine to you, "Buona Salute!" Here's to your good health!
